MRS. GEORGE GOULD.

The sudden death of Mrs. Gould has brought to the college, as to the town, a deep and poignant grief. She was one who had long made service the habit of her life. The fine energies of a richly cultivated mind were effectively brought to bear upon the various departments of church work successively committed to her charge; her practised skill as a housekeeper and a home-maker was spent without stint for the sick, the stranger, the lonely, the aged, and all within reach of her generous loving-kindness. Her last mortal deed was to write a note of friendly invitation. She laid down her pen, crossed from her desk to her sofa, and before her husband could reach her side, had passed beyond hearing of his call. So little was the preparation needed for her to join those unseen ministering hosts that do God's pleasure.

Student Government Meeting.

A meeting of the Student Government Association was held Thursday, April 16, at 5 P.M., to express the appreciation of the students for Miss Hill; and to discuss the candidates for student government president and vice-presidents. Miss Tatum spoke first of Miss Hill's services to the college; her procural of the playground and tennis courts, and her efforts toward better equipment of the gymnasium. She told of the introduction of rowing as a woman's sport, through Miss Hill's adaptation of a man's stroke to a girl's ability; and of the development of our present Tree Day dancing, from the Gilbert system. In it all she recognized Miss Hill's unselfishness in placing the college before her own needs or convenience. Miss Hoyt then spoke for 1910, telling of Miss Hill's recognition outside of Wellesley by the Emmanuel movement, and by the Copley Association, to which she was invited as a representative of dancing as a fine art. 1911 through Miss Hewitt, expressed its gratitude to Miss Hill for her encouragement and work with them. Miss Butterfield then told of Miss Hill's new work, the organization of games and athletic classes for spontaneous play. Miss Annin expressed appreciation for Miss Hill as an original figure in America. She represented the high opinion of her among the alumnæ as a self-forgetful director of physical training, who could make others forget themselves in their work. A motion was then carried to adopt resolutions, which Miss Little read, and a second motion passed to communicate with alumnæ to obtain their appreciation of Miss Hill.

It was announced from the executive board that Seniors were granted the privilege of attending one Sunday service in Boston, provided they returned directly after the service. Miss Baird requested that girls be careful about taking men to the Inn on Sunday without privilege.

A discussion of candidates for Student Government offices then followed. For president of Student Government, Miss Appenzellar spoke for Miss Hanford, and Miss Klingensmith for Miss Zabriskie. For vice-president, Miss Keim spoke for Miss Taft; Miss Mills for Miss Kennedy; Miss Sinex for Miss Amy Brown; Miss Hersey for Miss Hanford; Miss Eskey for Miss Spahr, and Miss Markley for Miss Hill.

The students expressed themselves as willing to reply to the application slips of the NEWS and Magazine, which are sent to every one at the beginning of the year. Miss Barrow reminded the girls of step singing on the first of May,—and the meeting adjourned.

DR. BARTON'S LECTURE.

On Thursday evening, April 16, Dr Barton gave the first of his three lectures, his subject this time being "Turkey."

Dr. Barton began by giving an idea of the great extent and population of the Turkish Empire, the inhabitants of which number thirty-nine million people,—a few Christians, but mostly Mohammedans.

Turkey is the most complete and probably the only wholly Mohammedan country in the world; it is the center of Mohammedanism. Since it is governed by and for Mohammedans, other people have little or no part in the affairs of the country. Turkey stands not because of her own power, but because of her peculiar position and her influence over surrounding countries. She is continually in a turmoil because of religious disputes and quarrels, in which outside countries do not care to interfere or to take sides.

The Sultan is a very shrewd, acute, unprincipled ruler, and can manage, in some way, to outwit anyone who ventures to argue with him. He trusts none, but keeps his own hand on all that goes on in his empire.

Mohammedanism blights the commercial, intellectual and moral life of any country in which it is powerful, and this is only too true in Turkey. If any progress has been made in the last fifty years, it [illegible] Mohammedan [illegible].

Although [illegible] hard to [illegible] yet the [illegible] work has been [illegible] and many [illegible] have been [illegible] founded and carried on.

The more the people learn in these schools the more [illegible] they become with their rulers and government. Turkey is no doubt the most [illegible] country of the world at the present time, but if once Christianity could gain the upper hand and direct the energy of this mighty people in the right [illegible], Turkey would be one of the finest [illegible] of the world.

MR. POWERS' RECITAL.

The college had a rare treat Monday evening, April 13, when Mr. Leland Powers, head of the Leland Powers Dramatic School, gave a reading in College Hall chapel from Dickens. His selections were from "David Copperfield" and later from "Bleak House."

As one may imagine, there might be great difficulty in making effective [illegible] cuttings. But the whole arrangement of selections was wonderfully well done—in four acts, representing the story of Emily's downfall.

It is, indeed, difficult to choose any one scene and say "this was strongest," or "that was truest." The fragment in which Ham sees the vision of death over the waters was especially wonderful.

But throughout all his readings was such distinct characterization, such [illegible] interplay of emotions, such subtlety and sureness that one cannot commend any particular one of Mr. Powers' strong points. Uriah Heep's character was portrayed almost too truly, too tragically. How deftly Mr. Powers managed Uriah Heep's asides!—his suavity to Betsey and his malignity to Micawber! And Micawber's part was a very difficult one and it might easily have been declamatory in his denunciation—but it was mature, subtle, compelling. Of the technical points one cannot say enough in commendation—of the beauty of Mr. Powers' voice—his wonderful blending of tones and almost undistinguishable shades—the ease and distinctness of his transitions.

In speaking afterward of his reading, Mr. Powers said, "Ah, what an audience!" He appreciated the response of the students exceedingly. He spoke of the hypnotic power so many readers exert over their audiences. He feels, however, that the true artist deals only with truth and should stimulate creativeness. The mind of the audience should be rather of reverent and open imagination than of forced attention.

EDITORIAL.

The preliminary season of Athletics has really begun this week, and this is one of the best chances we have to show our loyalty and enthusiasm. It is always harder to throw ourselves heart and soul into our three-hour weekly practices in the spring season than it is in the fall; and it is much harder to keep training when we really have no definite goal to which we may look forward. Field day is not ahead of us, and many times we ask ourselves, "What is the sense of working so hard now, when this summer we will get all out of practice again?" But there is use in it, and everyone would realize, if she stopped to think, that the preliminary season does count for a great deal. During the winter only a few privileged people can have the benefits of the gymnasium work. We are all supposed to walk a certain amount each week, but that surely does not call into action all the muscles of our body, as does a game of hockey, tennis or basket ball. We have, or most of us have, much latent energy, which is being stored up through the winter, and as soon as spring comes, we must make use of it. Why waste such valuable material? Our three hours of hockey, golf, running, basket-ball, tennis, archery or rowing give us a chance to exercise our bodies in healthy, enjoyable recreation.

And surely not all of our gain in this preliminary season can be lost before fall, when we come back ready to work, and work hard, in study and athletics as well. Then our class spirit will buoy us up, and we will play for Field Day.

Let us play for Field Day now! Let us put all our enthusiasm and life into our sports this spring. In this way we will show that we appreciate our new privilege in having a real, live Athletic Association at Wellesley College; one of which we are proud, and to which we are glad to give our loyal and enthusiastic support.

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas, Miss Lucille Eaton Hill, Director of Physical Training in Wellesley College, has, for over twenty years in the face of many difficulties, worked toward the development of the ideals of physical education, by the organization and establishment of the outdoor sports; and by the creation of the Picture Dancing which has made our Tree Day unique among College fetes,

Be it resolved, that the students of Wellesley College extend their gratitude and appreciation to Miss Hill, and

Be it further resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the COLLEGE NEWS.

COLLEGE NOTES.

The first Spanish play given in Wellesley comes Monday afternoon, and is called "Rosas d' Espana." It is the purpose of Miss Marcial, who wrote the play, to give an idea of Spanish every-day life and customs. Dances and games are introduced, as well as a Spanish fortune teller, a serenader, and various other characteristic features.

A meeting of Scribblers was held Friday evening, April 17, at the Agora House. Miss Ethel Ambler read.

Miss Lucile Eaton Hill has been invited to become a member of the Copley Society, Boston, as its first representative of the fine art of dancing.

"Over the Garden Wall," the new Tech show, is to be given at the Hollis Street Theater, Tuesday and Thursday afternoons, April 21 and 23. Held, Belden and other favorites, beside several new actors are in the cast, and the chorus is the prettiest Tech has ever had. As usual, a balcony has been reserved for Wellesley, and it is hoped that many will take advantage of it.

For the next week a collection of reproductions of the engravings and paintings of Albrecht Dürer may be seen in the gallery of the Farnsworth Art Building. The collection is only a part of the fine series belonging to the Art Department, but consists of the most interesting and representative pictures.

A matron is needed for a seashore home under philanthropic management from June 1st to October 1st. The position has been filled in the past by a graduate of a woman's college. The engagement begins too early for a student now in college, but it is possible that through this notice some graduate of earlier years may learn of the opening. Other details will be furnished on request by Miss Caswell, 130 College Hall.

A preparatory school in a city west of the Mississippi is offered for sale, as the owner is going into other work. For further inquiry please address Miss Caswell, 130 College Hall.

CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION PRAYER MEETING.

At the regular Thursday evening prayer meeting of April 16, Miss Mary Caswell spoke on the subject: "Above all that we ask or think." Eph. 3: 20. Miss Caswell began her talk by recalling to the mind of each one the parable of the lord who, upon leaving his home for a journey into a far country, left his talents with his servants. Miss Caswell called attention to the position of any man, upon whom has been thrust wealth to which he has not been accustomed. The faithful servant wishes to put this wealth to the best use. To accomplish the best result in any situation in life, guidance is needed; and the man, who wishes to make the most of his opportunities in the possession of wealth, must seek a higher wisdom than his own.

Miss Caswell emphasized the greatest of blessings which falls to each one of us in the impulse to ask for divine guidance. Like the young woman in the Old Testament story, who returned to her father's house to ask that he give her a more lasting gift than land,—that he give her springs of water that would be a blessing always,—we too should ask for the vital things of life. It is through our privilege,—faithfully used,—of asking of our Father, that we gain hope, power, and salvation. The three-fold aim of our college life, Miss Caswell expressed as the impulse to seek the best, to choose the best, and to give the best. In this aim of effort, choice, and service, there is a limitless field of asking. Effort without guidance is not profitable; choice without guidance is not wise; and service without the divine impulse is not Christ-like service. It is through prayer that we are reminded continually that our social effort needs social wisdom. The promise that the Father giveth to all men liberally, was the inspiration which Miss Caswell left with each one, to strengthen her impulse to ask.

Miss Caswell's talk was followed by prayers from many of the girls. Before the closing prayer and benediction, Miss Caswell read from the forty-second and forty-third chapters of Isaiah the verses characterizing the ideal servant.

DEBATING CLUB OPEN MEETING.

The open meeting of the Debating Club, held on April 14, represented a gathering of citizens of any small New York town. The subject for the evening, as explained by Mr. McCarrol, the chairman, was Labor Legislation for Women, as illustrated in the case of the People vs Williams. Williams was the owner of a bindery, where Kate Davis had been found working at 10.20 P.M., in violation of the Factory Act stating, "that no minor under eighteen years and no female be suffered to work in a factory after nine in the evening, or before six in the morning." The claim had been declared unconstitutional in court, and Williams had not been prosecuted. The discussion was on the justice of this decision.

Mr. Savage and Mr. Rimmer, leading speakers on the affirmative, upheld the constitutionality of this clause, and its necessity. Mr. Benton and Mr. Marston on the negative declared it to be unconstitutional on four grounds; because it interferes with freedom of contract; it classes women as minors; it is class legislation; and it is not useful as a health measure. The emphasis of the affirmative, and their strongest point, lay on the fact that the clause discussed was as constitutional as the ten-hour-a-day law, which the negative agreed in upholding. They also strongly emphasised the need of this clause to support the other law, and to protect the health and morals of the factory girls. The negative, without answering directly the first fact, pointed out the "inaccuracies and inequalities" of the clause, and its uselessness in supporting the ten-hour law, which is already so often violated. They also pointed out that sanitary conditions in a factory were apt to be as good in the night as during the day, and that the morals of a factory girl are no more endangered from coming to work at nine than from returning from it at that hour. Both sides generally ignored the fact that the clause is meant to prohibit not only all night work, but work to cease at ten, eleven, or twelve o'clock.

After the speeches and rebuttals of the main speakers, speeches from the floor were made by Mr. Collet and Mr. Pope, for the negative, Mr. Aiken and Mr. Hubbard for the affirmative. The latter in the character of a disabled German laborer made a personal and moving appeal in behalf of "mine Sophia" who must work so late, in spite of her cough. Miss Howard spoke against the clause, as a piece of class legislation, inconsistent at a time when women are seeking equal rights with men.

Mr. McCarrol then asked that a vote be taken. By the votes of the visitors and members, the affirmative won by a majority of fifteen to eleven. The result being announced, the meeting adjourned.

Throughout the debate, the sincerity and earnestness of the speakers was evident. The arguments of the negative were more logically arranged, those of the affirmative more convincing.

PARLIAMENT OF FOOLS.

"Oh, may I borrow your hat?" she said.
"I'm going to have a man.
I'd wear this dress but my coat is red
So may I borrow your dress instead?
I'll return it when I can."

"Oh, may I borrow your boat?" she said
"And your cushions green and tan?
I'd take my oars but they're heavy as lead
So may I borrow your oars instead
Oh,—And may I borrow your man?"

PEDAGOGY LECTURE.

On Wednesday afternoon, April 15, Dr. Spaulding, principal of the Newton High School, gave a lecture for the benefit of students in college intending to teach.

He spoke about matters of instruction as he saw them in actual experience, and tried to apply, in the concrete, the principles which have been discussed during the year in Pedagogy, in the abstract. He said the question which all through our course had directed our instruction was "What do you know?" That question had always determined our advancement. But inexperienced teachers, starting out on their career would all be confronted with the question, "What can you do?"

Dr. Spaulding gave us some valuable suggestions in regard to interviews which we might have with different principals, when trying to secure a position. He said, whomever we consult, he will doubtless assume we know enough, but what he will wish to find out is what we can do. In giving our answers, much depends upon our attitude. This will determine what are our real characters, and what we can do. Instead of answering the principal's question as most of us probably would, by saying we can teach this or that subject, we should say primarily that we can teach boys and girls—not subjects. We should have the real conviction that we want to educate children, and not merely teach our particular subjects. After conveying our real attitudes, then we may state through what medium we hope to teach,—Latin, history, science or whatever may be our specialty.

Throughout any interview, Dr. Spaulding said the principal would try to discover our characters on the emotional and volitional side; and that very important matter, too, the physical basis of our character—health, which must be good, to insure satisfactory work.

Dr. Spaulding made us realize the great difficulties confronting the inexperienced teacher, and the many things which she must learn, especially during the first two or three months. This is the time when the machinery, the system, and the routine of classes must be learned. Furthermore, with these difficulties comes a great danger, into which the majority of teachers fall. In learning to do, they forget to think. They teach what they already know, without new investigation, or deliberation and discussion; so that as a result, no further progress is made. Here is where our attitude will determine our success. It we start out with the conviction that we are to teach boys and girls, we cannot cease to think, but instead, will constantly advance.

After speaking of the difficulties and dangers of teaching, Dr. Spaulding mentioned the opportunities. He spoke of the salaries of teachers now, and of how low they averaged. He said this condition was the fault of the teachers themselves. They take, he said, the attitude of supplicants and beggars to the public. They are therefore dealt with in accordance with the attitude they assume. In other words, they insist on being treated as they treat their pupils. They complain, and demand higher salaries "en masse;" the result being that salaries now, are lower than they were ten years ago. "Do not beg for a salary," Dr. Spaulding said. "If you are worth more than you are getting ask for an increase in a tactful way. If you are not successful in obtaining it, go somewhere else."

Finally, in concluding Dr. Spaulding warned us not to forget to think. He reminded us to acquire the right attitude, to have courage, determination, a positive character, and the conviction that we want to educate our pupils in the right way.

Dr. Spaulding was very interesting and exceedingly practical. The applause given at the close of his lecture showed that he was thoroughly appreciated.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

All the lovers of the royal game of golf, whether organized or not, will be interested to know of the reorganization of the Wellesley Golf Club. For the last few years, the Wellesley Golf Club has struggled along under a formal, complicated, and very "top-heavy" constitution. It has been largely controlled by non-collegiate members under the form of a corporation, and its interest in the college has perceptibly diminished.

A new era is about to begin in the history of the club. The trustees, desiring to encourage out-door exercise among the students, have assumed the full care and control of the grounds, and have reduced the dues to a very nominal sum. Under the new constitution which is about to be ratified, the membership of the club will consist of college members entirely. All others who play will do so as guests of the club or its members and will have no voice in its government.

An annual fee of one dollar entitles any member of Wellesley College to the privilege of membership, thus extending the use of the attractive little club house a very good and fairly sporting nine hole course, and a possible first-class tennis court in the near future.

We prophesy a great future for this little club. In a college of this size, there are necessarily a great many girls who do not care, or are unable to belong to the organized sports. We hope this club will give the opportunity for all members to thus combine athletics with pleasure. Join the club and make it a complete success. The longer the roll-call the sooner will you be able to have tennis courts, better links, and anything "social" you like.

A meeting of all those interested in this project will be held at the Golf Club House next Tuesday, April 28, at 4:15 P.M. The business will be the adoption of the amended constitution, election of officers, and the enrollment of members.

I.

The principal defect in the late investigation of societies, lies in the attitude of the would-be reformer. The society reformer is, practically without exception, a society girl herself, and she naturally imagines that societies take up as much of the time of the non-society girl as of her own. Now this is a great and grave mistake! The average non-society girl does not sit around day and night thinking about societies. She does not, emphatically does not, and it might be well to realize this.

Too many such expressions as, "The society girl's duty to the non-society girl," have been flying through the air lately,—one might imagine the society girl a cannibal, and in need of the good offices of missionaries. What right has the society girl to be kind to her?

Wellesley is not a Utopia! For that matter, neither is the world. We are all pretty much on the same level. It is talk that makes the dividing line. Why talk? The present, it seems to the unbiased spectator, is a tempest in a teapot, a sort of monsoon in Mars.

ALUMNÆ NOTES.

In addition to notes concerning graduates, the Alumnæ Column will contain items of interest about members of the Faculty, past and present, and former students.

Miss Marjorie Hiscox, who was a graduate student in the Department of Latin last year, is studying for her master's degree at her Alma Mater, Vassar. Her thesis, which she hopes to present this spring, is a study of the Germans of the early Roman Empire based upon the Germania of Tacitus and the Latin inscriptions of Germany.

Miss Natalie Smith, 1904, who was obliged by the death of her brother, to give up for the year her position in the Reading High School, has accepted a position in the North Adams High School for the rest of this year, but will return to Reading in the fall.

A budget of news comes from the Class of 1896. Martha Bullis sailed in November for a winter abroad. Ada Belfield spent six months in Europe during the past year. Bertha Hyatt had a summer of travel in the North of Europe, going so far north as to see the midnight sun at the North Cape. Blanche Jacobs spent the summer in the British Isles. Lydia Wilkins had a trip last fall through Southern Spain. Gertrude Carter, missionary in China, after a summer among the mountains, has gone into housekeeping in a new place in Changsha, Heman Province, China. Eva Loudon is visiting a cousin in an Arizona mining camp and finds it most interesting; her address for the next few months is 106 West 2nd street, Dayton, Ohio. Mary Montgomery has no longer any connection with the publishing firm of Montgomery & Co., and is now manager for the firm of Singer & Co., Publishers. Edith Butler spent the summer in the Big Horn Mountains of Wyoming in August and September, camping and bear hunting. She has spent the winter in Aiken, South Carolina. Frances Pullen (Mrs. A. N. Chapman), who took her degree in medicine last June, does not intend to go into general practice, but will confine herself to laboratory diagnosis and Juvenile Court Dispensary Work.

Miss Helen Chandler, 1897, who was in the country on furlough last year, sailed for India from San Francisco October 24th, and reached India December 16th. She spent her Thanksgiving Day in Canton China. She is now settled at Mangalapuram, Madura, South India in the new bungalow of which the '96 room was furnished by the class.

Miss Sara Seaton, 1896, is teaching Botany in the High School of Cleveland, Ohio. She finished her work for the master's degree at Cornell last summer, published this winter her thesis, and expects to take her degree in June.

Miss Jennie Beale, 1896, who is teaching mathematics in the Holman School in Philadelphia, is also taking a course in English at the University of Pennsylvania.

Miss Lettice McCord, 1903, sailed in August for Europe expecting to spend the winter in Rome, and to travel in the spring northward into Norway and Sweden.

Miss Mary McIlwain, 1903, is still teaching in Port Rico, but has made visits during this past year to Venezuela, Curaçoa and the United States.

Miss Gertrude Welton, 1903, is in the second year of her medical course at Ann Arbor. Her address is 1211 Willard street, Ann Arbor, Michigan.

Miss Helen Cogswell, 1899-1902, whose stage name is "Helen Hale," is touring in the West in the musical comedy, "The Yankee Tourist."

The home of Mrs. William W. Travis (Marian Robertson, 1900-1901) is at Canet, Las Minas, Camaguay, Province Cuba. There is a colony of a score of American families there.

The following alumnæ have recently visited Wellesley: Miss Alice Cary Baldwin, 1890, who is teaching Latin in the Cambridge Latin School; Miss Edith Bancroft, 1892, Hartford (Conn.) High School; Misses Mary Haskell, 1897, The Haskell School, Boston; Charlotte Pullin, Margaret Hewitt, 1897, of the Newark (N. J.) High School; Miss Jessie Degen, 1898, of the Waynefleet High School, Portland, Maine; Miss Jane Beers, 1900, of the Walnut Hill School, Natick, and Miss Mabel Wright, 1900, of the Brooklyn (N. Y.) High School; Miss Elizabeth Hardman, 1905, who is studying at the Library School in Albany, New York; Miss Helen White, 1906; Miss Genevieve Washburn and Miss Alice Rossington, 1907.
